During the next few years there are bound to be increasing opportunities in Latin American countries for the youth of the United States. Whether because of intensification of the "good neighbor" policy, or the threat of invasion from abroad, this country will make every possible endeavor to facilitate its political and economic relationships with the great nations which lie to the south of us.

Only recently a plan for the formation of a gigantic "cartel system" among all the American nations was announced in Washington. This system would handle not only the trade between this country and South America, but also all the trade between all North and South American countries and other parts of the world. A billion dollar corporation would be established to handle the deal which is designed to counteract Nazi influence in South America.

Such economies, as well as the military co-operation which is being increasingly contemplated, will call for large numbers of young, intelligent Americans who can speak Spanish fluently and who know something of the history, traditions, and economic life of South American nations. There is sure to be a tremendous demand in the years to come for men of this type.

Smart young men will spend their spare time these days studying Spanish, reading up on South American history, and considering the possibilities of closer connections between the American continents. Public schools should place added emphasis upon the study of Spanish by young men and women and should provide increased facilities for learning to speak the language fluently.

Such knowledge is bound to prove a valuable asset for anyone in the years to come. —Sanford Herald.

FULLER'S FULMINATIONS

by Fuller Warren

In this the sixth of a series of weekly efforts to disseminate a little free learning, I am going to return to the originally charted course and "column" some about politics.

At the outset we should agree on the meaning of politics; we should not upon some abstract definition of politics. As now used the term covers everything from a national campaign to elect a President right down to the back room fingering of a party of "ward-heeders." Used in this loose, superficial sense, the term only describes what might be loosely called the phenomena of politics.

What the word needs is a definition of politics in its basic, generic sense. Let us move back into the mists of antiquity for such a definition.

Some time before the heroic "three hundred" perished at the pass of Thermopylae, a cynic philosopher by the name of Castoripha, thrust upon an unresponsive world the following definition of politics:

"Politics that baneful fiend 'three hundred' every brain, and poisons every social feeling, which intrudes itself on the festive banquet, and like the detestable harp, pollutes the very viands of the table, which contaminates the refreshing draught while it is being inhaled, which prompts the cowardly assassin to launch his poisoned arrows from behind the social bar, and which renders the bottle, that boasted promoter of good fellowship and hilarity, an infernal engine charged with direct combustion."

As manifested in modern times, politics might be more aptly defined as follows:

"That powerful influence that wreaths the frowning face of ambition, that causes the silent to become loquacious; that causes the humble to become effusive; that causes the ingrate to grow grateful; that causes the inho-storable to become hospitable; that causes the aristocratic to act democratically—what a pity it is that politics can't be with us always! But it comes only every two years.

I prefer to think of politics in terms of this last definition. Used in this sense, the word, politics, covers not only the efforts of men to be elected to office and their every activity by which men and women try to obtain an objective by ingratulating themselves with the public, by making themselves accessible and friendly.

As one who has viewed with sorrow the odium that has come to be attached to the term, politics, it is my fervent hope that the time may come when the word will be thought of in this sense. Having selected a suitable definition of politics, we now need to get a satisfactory definition of the chief by-product of politics, a candidate.

Just what is a candidate? What makes him act as he does? What are the component parts of a candidate? In what manner are the elements mixed to make a candidate? What is responsible for the strange antics and guffawing gyrations of a candidate?

The ages furnish no answer to these perplexing questions. These are mysteries unsolved and insoluble. The world is without a satisfactory definition of the strange specimen of homo sapiens, commonly called a candidate.

The nearest approach to such a definition was made by the late, great, fiddle-playing Governor of Tennessee, Honorable Robert L. Taylor, when he said, "To my way of thinking, there is nothing so pathetic in all the world as a candidate. He is like a mariner without a compass, drifting on the tempest-tossed sea of uncertainty, between smiling cliffs of hope on the one hand, and frowning crevices of fear on the other. He is a walking petition and a living prayer; he is the packhorse of public sentiment; he is the drum-major of politics; and even if he reaches the goal of his ambition, he will soon feel the heave of the culture in his heart, and the fangs of the serpent in his soul."

Now that you know what a candidate is, now that you of the suffering the travail, the anguish that a candidate must undergo, can you, will you ever again speak unkindly of, or treat harshly one of the hapless, harried creatures?

And speaking of candidates, I am reminded of a bar that one time at an opponent in the late and unlamented campaign for Governor. One of the candidates was a man of much promise. In fact, he promised profusely. There was very little that he didn't promise. He promised about everything but the good weather, and he was right on the verge of promising that when the campaign closed.

This promissory candidate made a speech at Chattahoochee, site of the Florida State Hospital for the Insane. He promised the asylum everything but protection from tornadoes, such as struck it a few weeks before he spoke there.

Several days after his speech at the asylum his opponent spoke at Chattahoochee. In referring to his opponent's plethora of promises the latter candidate said, "my undistinguished opponent has promised to increase the facilities of the asylum; he has promised to increase the staff of nurses and doctors; he has promised to increase the salaries of all employees; he has promised to increase the appropriation for the asylum; yes, he has promised to increase everything but the good weather, and he was right on the verge of promising that when the campaign closed."

Next week we will abandon this frivolous tale and serve up something heavy and hard to digest.

THESE THINGS HAPPENED IN THE LAKE REGION

15 YEARS AGO

AND WERE RECORDED BY THE EVERGLADES NEWS

When a motor car slipped from the railroad track into the canal Sunday it started people talking again about bridges and accidents, and renewed the expression of fear that there will be had accidents if the county bridges are not widened and made more secure. Local traffic is getting heavier all the time. If cross-traffic amounts to what is expected this winter, it will be dangerous for motorists to try to cross the bridges.

To have an office for a real estate business he will establish on Canal Point, G. H. Tucker is having a one-story frame building erected on one of his lots west of his pool hall. The building is 18x24. Fred Hand is superintending the construction.

Hon. J. C. Luning of Tallahassee, State Treasurer, attended a meeting Friday at South Bay of a sub-drainage district created at the last session of the legislature to embrace lands between Miami canal and North New River canal. The shore of Lake Okechobee is another boundary of the district.

Contract for paving two blocks of Pioneer Investment company subdivision to Canal Point from West Palm Beach canal and two blocks east of First, Second and Third avenue extending from Canine highway was given this week by Bonham and Magaw, Inc., owners, to the Lake Worth Construction Company. This is the first street paving contract ever let in the Everglades section of Palm Beach county. The construction company accepted a contract to lay 20,000 square feet of sidewalks on the street fronts on which the paving is to be done.

Extension of the Okechobee canal is under way at St. Lucie canal, nine miles north of Canal Point, for the foundation for the Bonham highway bridge. WPB Building Is Up Records Show Building activities in West Palm Beach during the first six months of 1940 swept far beyond the $1,500,000 mark, as result of data compiled totaling $835,962, which was almost equal to the total of $861,453 for the previous five-month period.

Final figures Monday showed that $1,697,415 in building permits have been issued since January 1. This is $736,510 more than the six-month total of $960,905 in 1939. The total this year is $579,448 greater than that of June last year, when the total was $256,464. Also, during the first six months of 1940 permits were issued for 117 new houses.

Two large construction projects were responsible for jending the June total to the highest single-month figure in many years. These were $180,000 permit for the Norton Gallery and Art School, and Southside white housing project for which permits aggregating $100,000 were issued.

ORPHAN GETS BIG FAMILY

Shirley Temple, who more than once has been a part of total orphan on the screen, gets her full share of family in Maurice Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird," picture in the new Technicolor.

In this screen masterpiece she has a mother, father, brother, grandfather and grandmother—played respectively by Spring Byington, Russell Hicks, Johnny Russell, Al Shean and Cecilia Loftus. To top it off Maeterlinck's famous play also gives Shirley an unborn baby sister, whom she meets in "The Land of the Deaf," and two foster parents—Nigel Bruce and Laura Hope Crews!

MICKY ROONEY

Micky Rooney who is known as youngest veteran in Hollywood further demonstrates his versatility as a trouper, portraying youthful "Tommy Edison" in "Young Tommy Edison." Micky was born on September 23 in Brooklyn, N. Y., and at the age of eleven months started his career on the stage. He was featured in a song-and-dance act when he was four, and was elevated to movie stardom while in his early teens. His recent hits are "Boys Town," "Out With the Harem," "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever" and "Baba in Arms."

BUYS MOUNTAIN VIEW

Director James Hogan is so enthusiastic about Arizona's Superstition Mountain country as backdrop for his new picture "Texas Rangers Ride Again" that he has bought a ranch in the locality where the mountain is framed in his front window.

PLAYERS REQUEST ELABORATE GOWNS

Acting isn't the only work the glamorous heroines of the screen have to do. When Jean Muir arrived from New York after two years on the stage to play the heroine in "A Girl in the Window," her first task was to stand on a pedestal for ten hours. This was so that twenty different costumes, ranging from sports ensembles to elaborate evening gowns, could be fitted and measured by the wardrobe experts. Each fitting took half an hour. Followed a three-hour session to work out three hairdresses and an hour for make-up tests. Laraine Day, who plays her younger sister, only had to stand on a pedestal four hours as the wardrobe workers had "her measurements" from other pictures.

TELLS HOW CRIMINALS WERE TRAPPED

How G-Men crack down on a nation-wide syndicate engaged in the distribution of counterfeit cigarettes is depicted in "Missing Evidence." Preston Foster portrays an F. B. I. agent who directs the government's attack upon the racket. Irene Hervey is Foster's leading lady who first opposes him, then assists him in his racket-smashing activities. Others in the cast include Chick Chandler, Inez Courtney, Noel Madison, Joe Downing and Oscar O'Shea.
